SUBSIDISED BASIC SKILLS COURSES IN THE WORKPLACE

Federally subsidised language courses (German, French, Italian), IT & Mathematics:

The government subsidises specific further training courses for companies that want to teach their employees job-related basic skills.

What are basic skills in the workplace?

In order to be able to cope well with everyday situations in the workplace, sufficient skills in reading, writing, language, everyday mathematics and the use of digital work tools are necessary:

- Take orders
- Using computers for simple operations
- Fill out work reports electronically
- Discuss technical problems and ask for new instructions
- Understand written work instructions or operational plans
- Log measurements and product codes
- Follow dosage instructions

How do I claim subsidies? All you need to do is define your needs and we will do the rest for you.

We take over the administration, planning, implementation and evaluation of the learning programmes tailored to your company and accompany you every step of the way.

Thanks to our experience from more than 40 courses carried out in the project "Simply better!... at work" project, we can provide you with optimal support in the development of your employees.

For more information on the funding priority of SERI, the State Secretariat for Education, Research and Innovation, "Simply better!... am Arbeitsplatz" can be found at besser-jetzt.ch/betriebe.
